The entire house exudes modern functionalism, an architectural style that stands in stark contrast to the surrounding natural environment and its dark lake waters and tall pine forest. With its Swisspearl-clad, white rectilinear volumes, this house creates a dramatic counterpoint to the Nordic landscape.

Architect Nils Nordkvist is known for experimenting with varying ceiling heights, creating dynamic spaces and enhancing the sense of openness. The use of white, horizontal, Swisspearl fiber cement panels adds a striking visual contrast to the backdrop of the rural landscape. The client opted to fully clad the exterior with Swisspearl panels as they are maintenance free and are a sleek and cost-effective alternative to plaster or masonry walls. The result is a clean, modern aesthetic that is practical and visually striking. Architect Nils Nordkvist in collaboration with Willa Nordic describes it as a “house with attitude.”
